

Emily Siegel, Board Member

Emily Siegel is a child psychologist who lives with her husband and three daughters in Yarmouth, Maine. She moved to Maine with her family in 2008 and joined Bet Ha'am soon after. Emily's daughters participated in religious school and celebrated their bat mitzvahs with the congregation. Emily's older children are twins and now juniors in college. Her youngest is a rising high school senior. Emily has served the congregation as a volunteer in several different capacities. She chaired the COVID Response Committee and, in that role, greatly enjoyed working with congregants and Board members to address the complex issues faced by the congregation during the pandemic. Emily has special interests in problem solving, conflict resolution and community building and is honored to serve on the Board of Bet Ha'am.
